Mr. Michaels thanked me and noted that he would have to take it out of his office to meet with Representative Lipscomb and discuss it with him.

2. On this specific point, Mr. Michaels noted that it had come to the attention of the Committee this morning that DIA had requested certain Defense contractors to make analysis of various new Soviet aircraft. These requirements are set forth apparently in prime contracts but at no additional cost to the Air Force. Specifically mentioned this morning was Grumman Aircraft Corporation analysis of the Foxbat. This puts a new dimension to the question previously raised in the meeting between Mr. Duckett and Mr. Lipscomb, "who is making the analysis of new Soviet aircraft - the Agency or the Air Force?" The question also arises whether Grumman in its analysis of Foxbat had available to it the sum total of Agency information or something less.
